Foreword

For one hundred and eighty-eight years men and women of America have struggled for the sacred principles of freedom and brotherhood. Just as each of them have striven, so we must strive so that our ends are just, and we must achieve our convictions. It is the fundamental greatness of our country, based upon love and respect of our rights, which provides the theme for this yearbook.

Throughout the pages of this volume are graphic manifestations of the theme. The end papers depict the timeless beauty of Bowden Hall. That familiar structure is more than stone, and brick, and glass; it is the heart of a community where freedoms are many, and brotherhood is a way of life. The original block print opposite this page is of deep significance. It illustrates not only the rising and falling of men's fortune, but also the eternal determination which binds each with the others. The theme is further illustrated by the cover and other art.

This book is the work of a few for the benefit and use of a group which is not much larger, yet its theme knows no bounds, no academic frontiers, no geographical demarcations. Rather it is a universal and imperative message, a message of love and liberty.

The Cheshire Cadet Corps of 1886 stands at attention in front of Bowden Hall during the time when the Academy was a military school.

History of the Cheshire Academy

The Cheshire Academy for many years has been called a melting pot of students. Students have united in brotherhood in their striving for higher education. Each person has grown to treat the student next to him as a brother, casting aside unimportant differences between them, but at the same time valuing highly the uniqueness of every individual. Freedom of thought, speech, and action are all practiced for the better of the student community. Students communicate with each other freely and without anxiety. From this free communication, new ideas and thoughts are developed and transferred into actions. Brotherhood and freedom both contribute to make the Cheshire Academy.

The plans for the founding of the school to be called the Episcopal Academy of Connecticut were drawn up in 1794 by the Episcopal Convention of the Diocese of Connecticut. The school was organized and opened in the autumn of 1796. The curriculum offered courses on a secondary and college level. It was accepted as an institution of higher learning; though it was never granted a college charter it is considered the earliest junior college in America. Dr. John Bowden was elected as the first headmaster of the school in 1796. He was the head until 1802. In his honor the administration building is known as Bowden Hall. When Reverend Mr. William Smith, the successor of Dr. Bowden, died, the Reverend Mr. Tillotson Bronson became headmaster.

Just as the Academy served as a college as well as a preparatory school, (until 1823 and the founding of Trinity College), it was also unusual in that it was a center of education for girls as well as boys. In 1836 the constitution of the school was reformed and accepted, providing that the Academy should admit boys only.

Between 1835 and 1860, the school prospered greatly under the direction of the Reverend Doctors Beardsley, Paddock, and Ballard. Many famed graduates attended the school in that time.

After a minor depression in the school as a result of the Civil War, the Reverend Doctor Horton was elected to the office of headmaster in 1862. During his thirty years in office, Dr. Horton changed the life on campus to that of a military school. Dr. Horton died in 1892, shortly after he had resigned. The main dormitory on the campus was named Horton Hall in his honor.

The Reverend Mr. Stoddard followed as headmaster. His policies were the same as Dr. Horton's, until he resigned four years later. Mr. Eri D. Woodbury, a Civil War veteran, took over the position as the last headmaster before the reorganization of the school.

At the beginning of the twentieth century, the Episcopal Academy of Connecticut was named the Cheshire School. Fourteen years later, in 1917, the school was leased to Mr. Joseph Harriman, who remodeled the whole school. It was known as the Roxbury School in the years from 1917 to 1937. In 1937 a new charter was granted to the school, and the former Roxbury School became, as we know it today, the Cheshire Academy. In 1917 Mr. Arthur N. Sheriff came to the Academy. In the early 1920's, Mr. Sheriff was elected headmaster, and he still holds the office. His influence and reputation as headmaster spread throughout the country, and the Academy became recognized as one of the finest preparatory schools. Under Mr. Sheriff, the school has rapidly made improvements each year. The projects taken on by the school this year are the building of the new Von Der Porten Hall to house one hundred twenty boys. Also the Arthur N. Sheriff Field House is in the process of being built. All these projects have been undertaken in order to serve the growing student body.

Bowden Hall, the first building of the Episcopal Academy of Connecticut, still standing, now serves as the administration office. Bronson Hall, on the right, contains the school library and the old chapel.

Inter-Club Council governs student body

The Inter-Club Council is the representative body of the students and is divided into four groups: the Foote, Wheeler, Welles, and Morgan clubs. From these clubs the representatives obtain their seating on the council. The advisors of the clubs are: Mr. Ernest Beaulac, Mr. Ralph Bills, Mr. Lawrence Kelley, and Mr. Stewart Lindsay. The council meets regularly every Monday of the school year. The Inter-Club Council exists for the purpose of creating and bettering the welfare of the students and the Academy.

Among the projects undertaken this year were the annual tea dance and mid-winter prom, also the drives for the Red Cross, Cancer, Tuberculosis funds. Contributions were made to the World University Service, the Harmon Leonard Jr. Youth Center, the American Field Service, and the United States Olympic Team. The ICC appropriates its money in various ways. The fund raising committee has sold school rings and school mugs. Other charities are collected from the students.

Senior members of the council assist in the dining room by taking charge of tables. Inter-Club basketball and the club banquet are sponsored by the ICC. Work projects around the school and clean-up details are supervised by the ICC. Bermuda shorts day was originated in the council and approved.

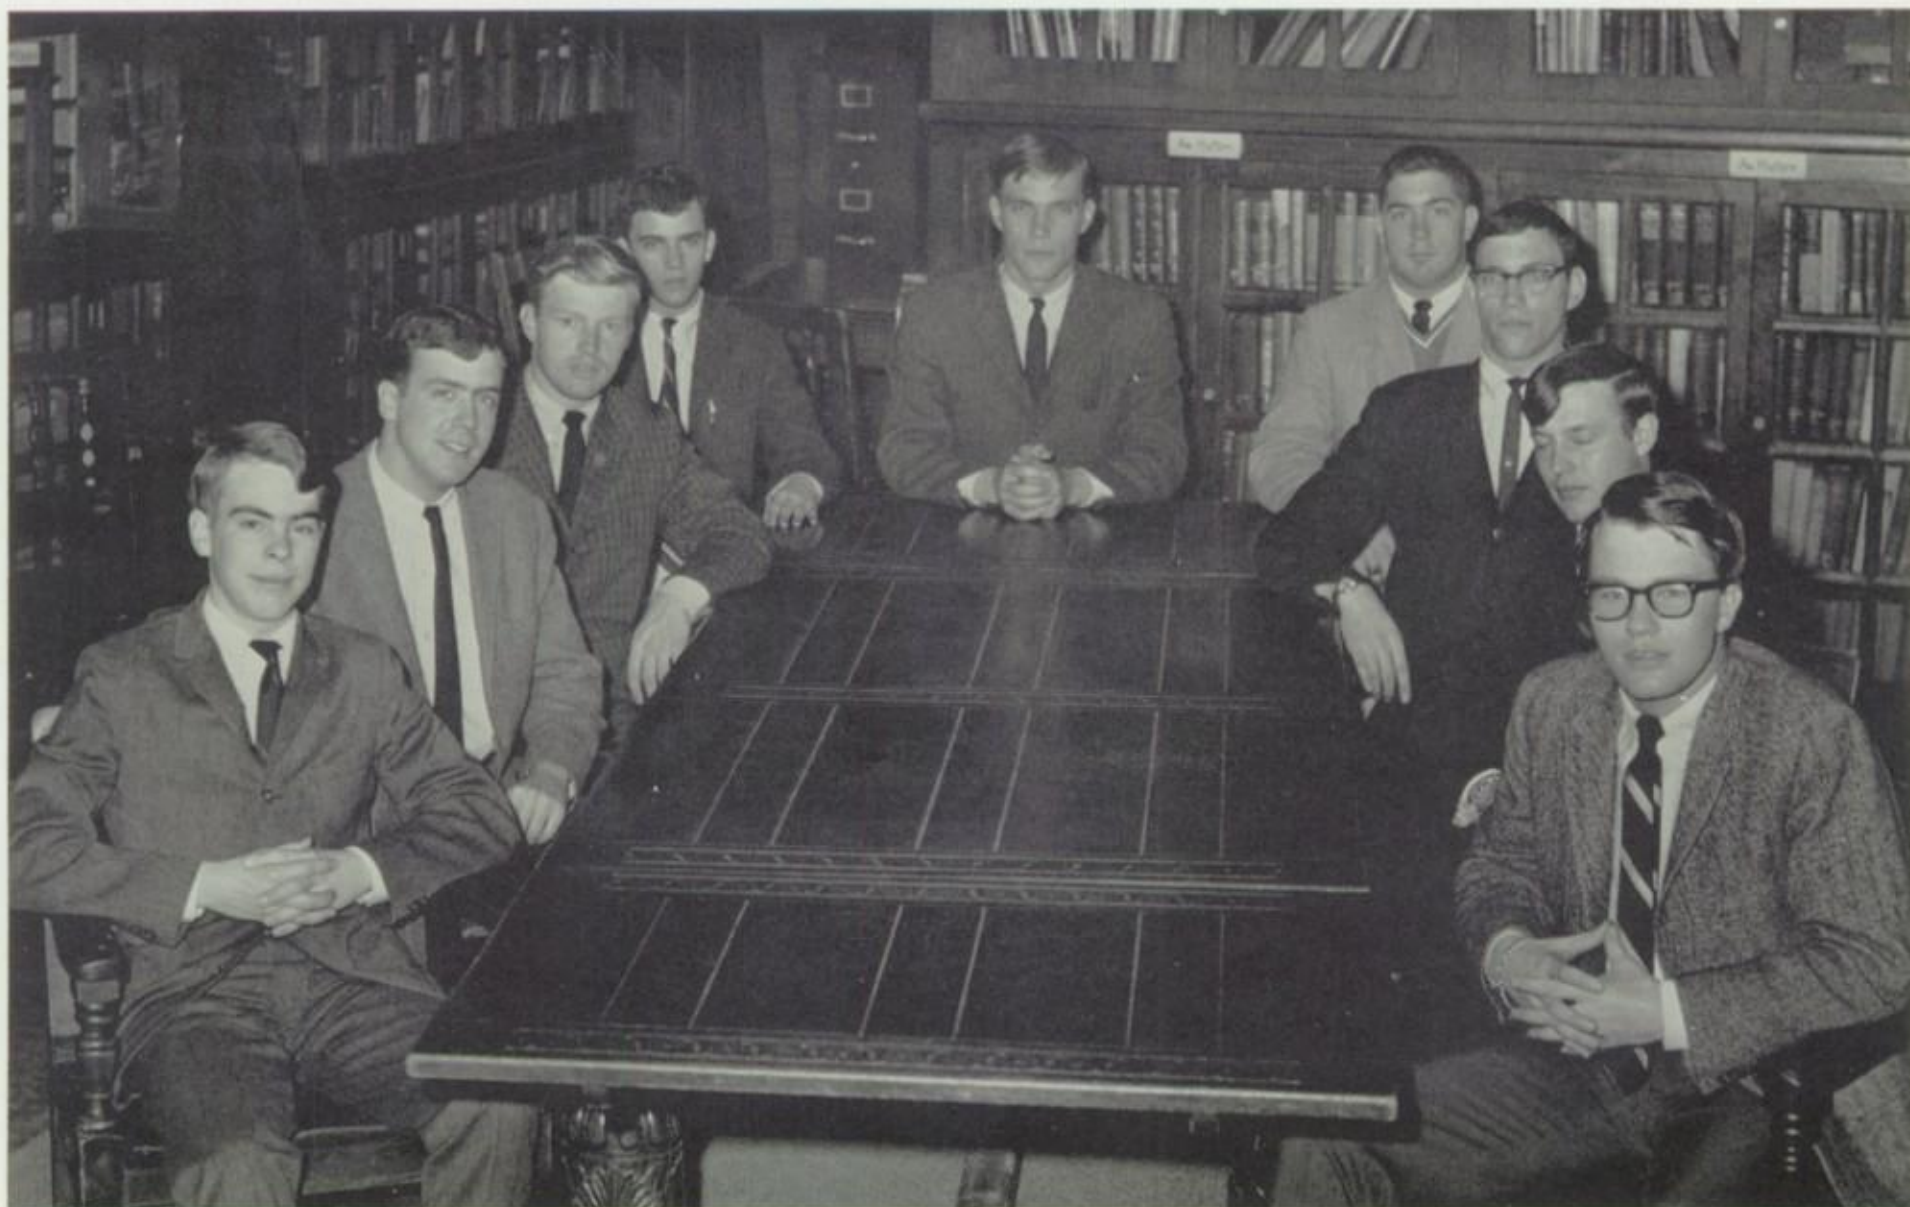

This year the council revised its constitution to the effect that all members are now elected instead of appointed. Council members were present at the Watkinson Student Government Conference and also the major conference of the New England Student Government Association at Mt. Hermon, Massachusetts. President Robert Svensk was on the Executive Committee of the Association.

The Academy Review adopts photo-offset process

The Academy Review is a monthly publication except during the summer months when it is published once. The purpose of The Academy Review is to inform the student body, faculty and alumni about all significant aspects of Academy happenings, to show what events are occurring in the near future, and to present feature articles: "What's Your Opinion?" in which students and faculty express their ideas concerning pertinent problems; "Sports Parade" deals with highlights and sidelights of the sports world at the Academy; "Interscholastic Briefs" compiles information from the many exchange school newspapers; "Disc Review" examines recent albums, both classical and jazz; "Campus Crier" illustrates the lighter side of campus news; "International Section" presents current topics of world interest under the guidance of Mr. Ralph Bills; the Junior School page, "The Cat's Meow," carries social and athletic news; the editorial column allows members of the staff and the students to present constructive and needed criticism on subjects of their own choosing.

The newspaper was awarded for the eighth consecutive year the award "highest achievement" from the Boston University Scholastic Press Association which was attended by publication students in October. Members of the staff also attended in November The Connecticut Scholastic Press Association, Inc. convention in Torrington, Connecticut. Co-Editor Robert Fink and Sports Editor Leslie Jacoby were members of a panel which discussed headline writing.

Several important changes were made in the newspaper this year. The editors agreed to adopt the new photo-offset method of printing, which resulted in clearer and sharper photographs and print, and the omission of lines between columns. A new flag for the top of the first page was designed by the art staff.

Dramatic Association scores two brilliant hits

Lt.-Col. Chipman: And a man therefore in his heart does indeed make some inner judgment as to the orders he obeys.

This year, two plays were produced by the Dramatic Association under the capable direction of Mr. Robert Marshall. The first of these was Saul Levitt's The Andersonville Trial, the trial and sentencing of Captain Henry Wirz by a military tribunal for his part in the brutal slaying of hundreds of Union prisoners of war at the confederate prison in Andersonville, Georgia, during the Civil War. It was presented on a Saturday night entertainment on November 23. The second play was William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream. In order for this play to be presented, the stage was extended several rows out into the auditorium, so that scenes could be presented without scenery changes. The sets were constructed to create a magic, dream-like atmosphere. It was presented twice during the Senior Prom weekend.

The Dramatic Association is a large group made up of actors, carpenters, painters, lighting technicians, property men, and others.

Manual acquires new look

From the left: Mr. Ernest Beaulac (Advisor), Frederic Smith, Ramon Kasten, Joel Beck (Editor).

The Cheshire Manual has proved very useful in aiding both new students and old students of the Academy. It contains information concerning clubs, extracurricular activities, sports, maps, rules, and other vital information. The Manual helps the new student to adjust to the customs, life, and regulations of the Academy. Many innovations are being introduced this year, including a change in cover. There are new maps, a description of new clubs, a list of all Inter-Club Council members. The new fall sports schedule for 1964 is also included.

Assignments are given out to the staff, while Mr. Beaulac gives some valuable instructions during one of the staff's many work sessions.

The Press Club reports to the community and the nation

The Press Club, one of the school's most important organizations, was founded during the 1949 summer session. Under the leadership of Mr. Gordon Atkins, the Press Club reports news of academic, social and athletic programs to local and distant newspapers throughout the country.

Members of the club travel with athletic teams and report results to nine newspapers, including The New York Times and The Boston Globe.

Much experience is gained in the field of public relations and sports writing, as the members of the club work closely with the sports writers of two local newspapers, The New Haven Register and The Waterbury Republican.

Junior School Achievement members prepare for future leadership

The purpose of the Achievement Committee is to better the Junior School, to set good examples for the others, and to organize various activities.

Due in the large part to the work of Mr. Robert Phillips and Mr. Michael Kita, the members of the council show the other boys leadership and act as responsible citizens. They have initiated such programs as bowling during the winter months.

At the present time, they are focusing their attention on tennis. Already twenty-four students have reported for instruction.

Art Club contributes its talents to various school functions

The Art Club is located in Phillips House Annex and is advised by Mr. Frederick Ortnier. It contributes primarily to dramatics and the various publications.

Chapel Committee continues charitable works

The Chapel Committee is composed of students from all classes who are approved by the headmaster.

The committee, under the Reverend Lyle Butler, holds weekly meetings in the Old Chapel where the business at hand is taken care of. This year's Chapel Committee has done many things, from inviting guest speakers to attend our services and planning outings, to the continuation of the adoption of Nam SooHong, a Korean boy, through the Save The Children Federation.

The committee has also sent representatives to religious conferences around the state. This year they were held at the Gunnery School and the Westminster School in Simsbury Connecticut. At these conferences there were guest speakers who spoke on religion. After the lectures, representatives from different schools broke up into groups and discussed what the speaker had said.

Among the guest speakers who have been at our chapel services this year are The Reverend Aute L. Carr, Associate Dean at the Yale Divinity School; Rabbi Abraham Feldman of the Temple Israel of Hartford; and our own headmaster, Mr. Arthur N. Sheriff.

Of the many guest speakers invited by the Chapel Committee, one was the prominent Dean Carr of the Yale Divinity School, Yale University.

Catholic Chapel Committee

Founded in 1959, under the supervision of Father William O'Brien, The Catholic Chapel Committee assists at the mass on Sundays. Members, now under Father Francis Karvelis, serve as altar boys, read the gospel, take up the collection, help dismantle the altar after mass, and assume other responsibilities.

Collections taken during the year are given to St. Bridget's Church, whose priests say mass in the chapel. Mr. John Leahey is the faculty advisor.

Chapel Choir sings at religious services

The Chapel Choir, under the dedicated service of Mrs. Rebecca Kita, consists of a small group of students who sing religious hymns and anthems. Throughout the year this ensemble of sixteen boys has performed at weekly Sunday chapel services and other musical and solemn ceremonies on the school calendar. Ira Fein, Arnold Adams and Christopher De Santis were the three outstanding soloists of the year. The first performance was at the First Congregational Church in Southington. A week later the Vesper Service was held in the old Chapel in Bronson Hall, and the choir acted out the traditional candlelight service. At the Baccalaureate Service the Choir took a leading part once more. The choir went on two outings during which they had dinner and saw a movie.

The International Club stimulates student interest in world affairs

The International Club has as its aim the promotion of an interest and understanding of the world's peoples and their cultural heritages, while striving for a friendlier relationship between foreign and United States students.

Under the leadership of President Rafael Kodesh and the guidance of faculty advisors Mr. Henry Shaefer, Col. Victor King, and Mr. Carlos Penalver, the club enjoyed a successful year which included speakers from various nations; co-sponsorship with the Chapel Committee of a civil rights discussion presented by a group of Yale undergraduates; a visit to the United Nations headquarters in New York; and various round-table debates dealing with such topics as the Panama crisis, the Cuban situation, and the United States foreign policy.

In their final meeting, the members decided not to award the club's annual scholarship. This year's fund will be added to next year's grant.

The Secondary School Society for International Cooperation was founded on November 27, 1927, by Miss Mary R. Hillard, headmistress of the Westover School. The first meeting was attended by representatives from Choate, Loomis, Taft, Westover, and Saint Margaret's. Eighteen other secondary schools in Connecticut were then invited to join the organization which meets twice a year and whose purpose is "the development of international consciousness by the promotion of separate and joint meetings for the discussion of international affairs and causes."

On April 19, a S.S.S.I.C. meeting was held at the Loomis School. The delegates participated in a model of the State Department, assuming the different desks in the State Department, and advising the President as to whether or not the United States should unequivocally support measures seeking immediate independence for Angola and Mozambique, and whether or not the United States should support one-party socialist states in Africa.

Radio Club studies electricity

After a lapse of several years, the Radio Club was reestablished under Mr. Richard Gray. The club met in Mr. Gray's classroom every Thursday at 3:30. The purpose of the club was to study electricity and its application to radios and to obtain amateur radio licenses for members.

Mr. Gray conducted several demonstrations; movies on basic nuclear physics, and its application to electronics were shown; experiments were made with the Leydon-jar, the Von de Graff generator, and the Wheatstone Bridge.

The Photography Club once again had an extremely productive year. Much emphasis was placed upon the contribution of photographs to both the yearbook and the newspaper, as well as upon instruction sessions of proper darkroom techniques. A new enlarger was acquired to supplement the equipment already in the lab. During the year, members took field trips and spent much time in darkroom instruction sessions with the club's advisor, Mr. Norton Burkowitz, a professional photographer.

Under the guidance of Mr. Burkowitz the group visited the Davenport Photo Laboratories in New Haven and ended the year with a trip to Constitution Plaza in Hartford.

Samuel Rothbeind and Harvey Klorman adjust the new enlarger which the club acquired this year for the darkroom.

Key Club trains students in civic responsibilities

The Key Club is devoted to the Academy, the student body, faculty, and visitors. It serves as official guide and welcomer for the Academy. Any student can become a candidate for this organization, but only a few attain the honor of becoming members.

The club under Mr. Stewart Lindsay renders its services in various ways. It looks after visiting teams, providing them with refreshments after games. On Mothers' Day and Fathers' Day it guides parents around the campus, directs traffic, and provides helpful and useful information.

The club also assists the main office in the mailing of various school literature to alumni.

Horizons

Horizons is the Cheshire Academy literary magazine. Its purpose is to elicit from the student body short stories, essays, poems, translations of a considered literary value, art, photographs and other materials. The magazine first appeared in May, 1957. Its foreword by Anthony Bell, editor and senior who did so much to found the magazine, states that the magazine be used as an outlet for the creative abilities of both students and faculty.

This year the Glee Club attended two concerts, gave five performances at the Academy, and performed four concerts outside the Academy. Truly this was a singing year.

Something old and something new describes this year's Glee Club. Old traditions of the club were continued: The Christmas Program, the Carol Sing and Dance, and after a lapse of about ten years the Quarter Notes quartet was revived. Mr. James Loder, who so devotedly directed the Glee Club for many years, turned his baton over to Mr. Richard Gavitt. Mrs. Michael Kita was accompanist.

The occasion for the first performance was a sad one, the memorial service held at the Academy for the late President John F. Kennedy. This was soon followed by the annual Christmas Program and a special performance at the Congregational Church in Southington.

Two trips were made this year to hear college groups sing. The first trip was to Wesleyan University. The second was the annual one to hear the singing groups at Yale University.

One of the best performances of the year was given at the LaSalette Seminary in Cheshire. After the performance of the Fantasticks the Academy boys were given a tour of the school and served refreshments. The residents of the Elim Baptist Home in Cheshire expressed their appreciation for the concert the Glee Club gave there during the winter.

In the spring the club sang for the annual Mothers' Day and participated in the Jamboree held at the Academy on May 31, when all the singing groups of the school performed. Invitations were sent out by Mr. Sheriff to the parents of the boys in the groups and to the faculty. An important innovation this year was the singing at the Baccalaureate Service instead of the Commencement Exercises.

Junior School Glee Club delivers five successful concerts

At the piano: Mrs. Rebecca Kita (Director).

Under the direction of Mrs. Rebecca Kita, the Junior School Glee Club made five appearances this last season.

The first performance was for the Academy Christmas program, where twenty-seven boys sang Christmas hymns.

On Tuesday, December 17, the boys were invited to give a concert at the First Congregationalist Church of Southington.

The third time they appeared in public was for the Congregational Church again. This time they sang several tunes from the Broadway hit musical, Oliver.

At the annual Mothers' Day program, on May 9, the fourth concert was given.

Their last appearance was in conjunction with all the other musical groups of the Academy in a jamboree held on Sunday afternoon, May 31.

The Dance Band swings at local community social events

The Cheshire Band, conducted by Mr. Sayard Stone, played at the home football games.

The Cheshire Academy Dance Band, under the direction of Mr. Sayard Stone, enjoyed a very rewarding year. Various engagements brought the seventeen-piece band to such school events as Mothers' Day, Fathers' day, and a Saturday evening performance for the entire student body. The highlight of the year was the opportunity to play at functions held at the Cheshire High School and the Copper Valley Club.

The band's advisors are Mr. Sayard Stone and Mr. Richard Spignesi, both of whom are accomplished musicians and music instructors at the Academy. Most band members have at least five years experience with their instruments. Musical arrangements vary from up-tempo swing numbers and slow ballads to the cha-cha and twist.

Keystones increase repertoire in their second year

This small group, in its second year, has become one of the major singing groups. Mr. Richard Gavitt, the founder-director, is also the Glee Club director.

The group first appeared before the public at the Academy on Fathers' Day. After hearing a nationally known folksinging group, the Keystones added their version of "Rock My Soul" to their performances. About fifteen different songs were learned during the year. By the end of the year they had performed on eight occasions, four of them here at the Academy. They wound up the year with a picnic and their part of the Jamboree held at the Academy.

Chess Club grows in popularity

James Berlowe moves his pawn into an advantageous position over his opponent, Robert Beck.

The Chess Club was under the new direction of Mr. Jackson Taylor. Last year's advisor, Mr. Paul Boyd, was also present at the popular Wednesday afternoon meetings. Everyone had a chance to play for the team. Each boy was given a 1000 points and was arranged on a chess ladder. The top six players on this ladder constituted the team.

Even though all of last year's members returned this year, the chess team lost all its matches.

Mr. Taylor held informal sessions to aid and instruct members on the chess opening and other important plays. Mr. Taylor, who is new to the school, gave of his best and increased the player's knowledge of the game.

THE PHYSICS CLUB, under the supervision of Mr. Richard Gray, met every week. Members, all of whom are enrolled in physics, used kits supplied by the Bell Telephone Company. These kits dealt with the sun and solar energy. Besides visiting the American Cyanamid Company, the club journeyed to Yale University to observe the new atom-splitting cyclotron and to Bradley Field, Hartford, where they were shown how weather forecasts were made up. Besides industrial physics, the club studied the mechanism of the automobile.

THE HISTORY CLUB, a new organization under the direction of Mr. Jackson Taylor, was approved by the I.C.C. The club formulated its constitution and elected permanent officers.

Freely discussing current events, the members gave a full report of specialized topics each week, ranging from Viet-Nam to the elections of 1964.

As concisely stated in the preamble of its constitution, the purpose of the History Club is as follows: "We, the members of the Cheshire Academy History Club, have joined together in order to better our understanding and enjoyment of history through the discussion of current events."

Meteorology Club installs new instruments

The Meteorology Club successfully completed its third year. A set of instruments was installed in a showcase during the Christmas vacation. The instruments, presented to the school by former club President Donald Rosenberg, were mounted in Seabury Hall and have been a center of attention for the entire student body.

The club was host to Meteorologist James McDonald of the Traveler's Weather Service in Hartford. In May the club visited the Traveler's Weather Service. It saw the meteorologist at work with his instruments and weather maps.

The Club continued to post daily weather reports in Seabury and the Jigger Shop, and an all-time high accuracy percentage was reached last year. The club was able to make large strides in the understanding and study of the weather.

The Chemistry Club has completed its second year under Mr. Bernard Jurale. At its first meeting, the club elected officers and voted upon a date for meetings. The club originally included about fifteen boys, but by the close of the year, the number had increased to twenty. Some members were part of last year's club. Other members have not yet had chemistry as a course but show a keen interest in it.

The Chemistry Club performs experiments which cannot be done during class hours. Some of these include the making of chlorine and of iron.

Every boy in the club took a turn in conducting an experiment.

One of the most exciting experiments performed by the club was the thermite reaction between aluminum and iron II oxide.

Mr. Burton explains homologies between the human and cat anatomies to Paul Jacobson, Andy Hendryx, and Mike Morgillo.

This year, under the leadership of Mr. John Burton, head of the Biology Department, a Biology Club was formed. Realizing the need for extra study in Biology, about eight boys started the club in the fall. The club met every Tuesday in Mr. Burton's room.

On December 9, six members traveled with supervisors Mr. Burton and Col. Victor King to Yale's Peabody Museum of Natural History in New Haven. There, they were guided on a tour by a museum employee and close acquaintance of Mr. Burton. The tour covered both public and restricted exhibits.

The boys conducted a special study of birds and intensified their general knowledge of biology.

In the future, the club hopes to expand its equipment, conduct more field trips, and visit more museums.

WORK

Paperwork introduces a new year at registration time

Over eight hundred students were welcomed at Bowden Hall, registration center, on September 21, 22, and 23.

Arrival day at the academy for the old boys was not anything new. For the uninitiated the maze of paperwork, people to see, and places to go seemed almost endless.

During the day students received their identification tags, picked up school texts, settled in dormitories, became familiar with the many school rules in the manual, greeted old friends, and made new ones.

On Sunday, they attended a tea at the home of the headmaster, Mr. Sheriff.

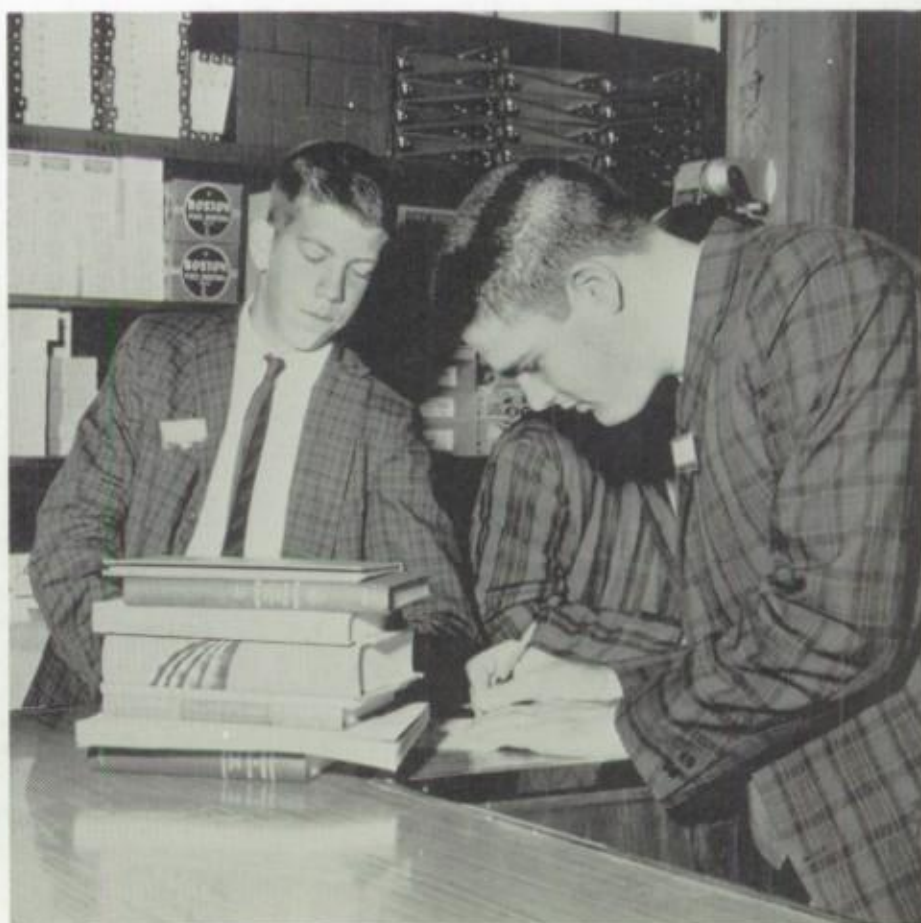

The student body this year was composed of 169 students from New York and 421 from New England of which 366 came from Connecticut. There were also representatives from other states, Canada, and fifteen foreign countries.

Mr. Henry Shaefer assists the incoming students at registration.

Mr. John Gillies, Registrar, distributes classroom schedules, necessary parts of every student's equipment, before he can finally relax.

Christopher Porteus, scholarship student, out of his more familiar element, the upstairs paperback store, helps students select texts.

Mr. Gamer of New Haven, official outfitter for the school, measures a new student for his Cheshire Academy blazer.

An anxious student and a curious father share an experience they will never forget—settling down in a strange dormitory and learning about the Academy from the Manual.

At registration, students and teachers are issued name tags to provide an introduction and to increase friendly relations. Here Robert Svensk, President of the Inter-Club Council, takes charge of distribution.

Mr. Morris Sweetkind, Head of the English Department and co-editor with John Gassner of Yale of Introducing the Drama, discusses his new book, Teaching Poetry in the High School.

The seeking out of student response in informal group discussion is led by Mr. Ralph Bills.

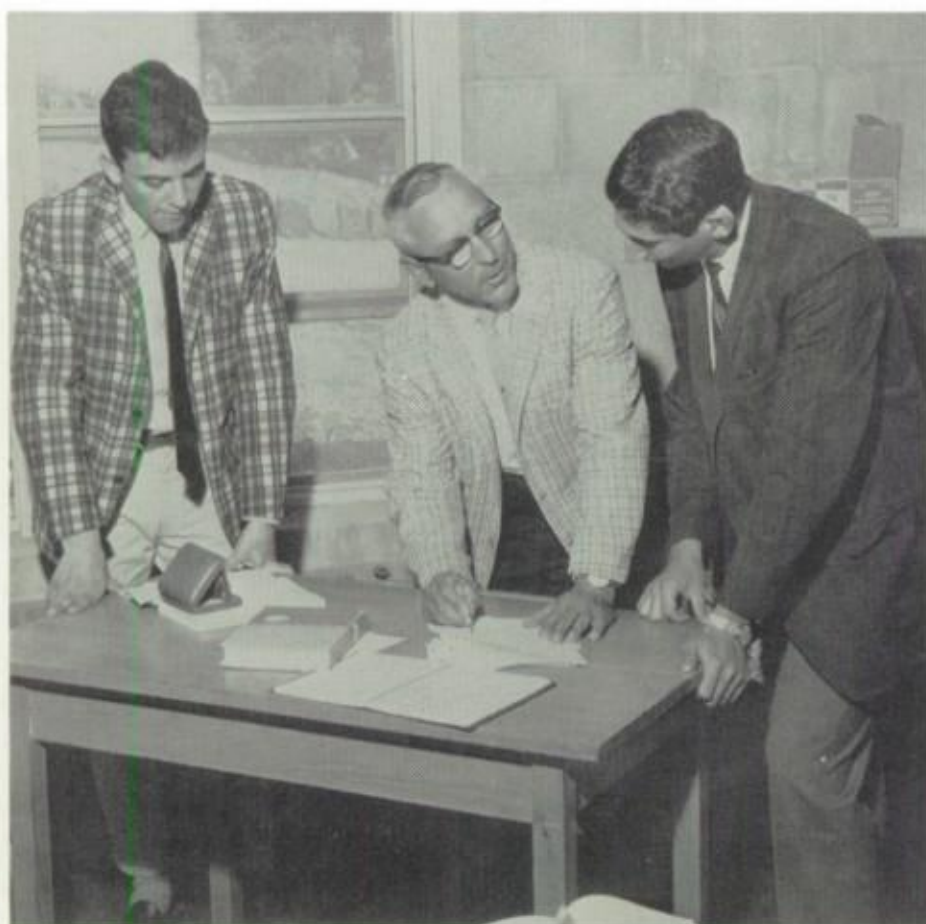

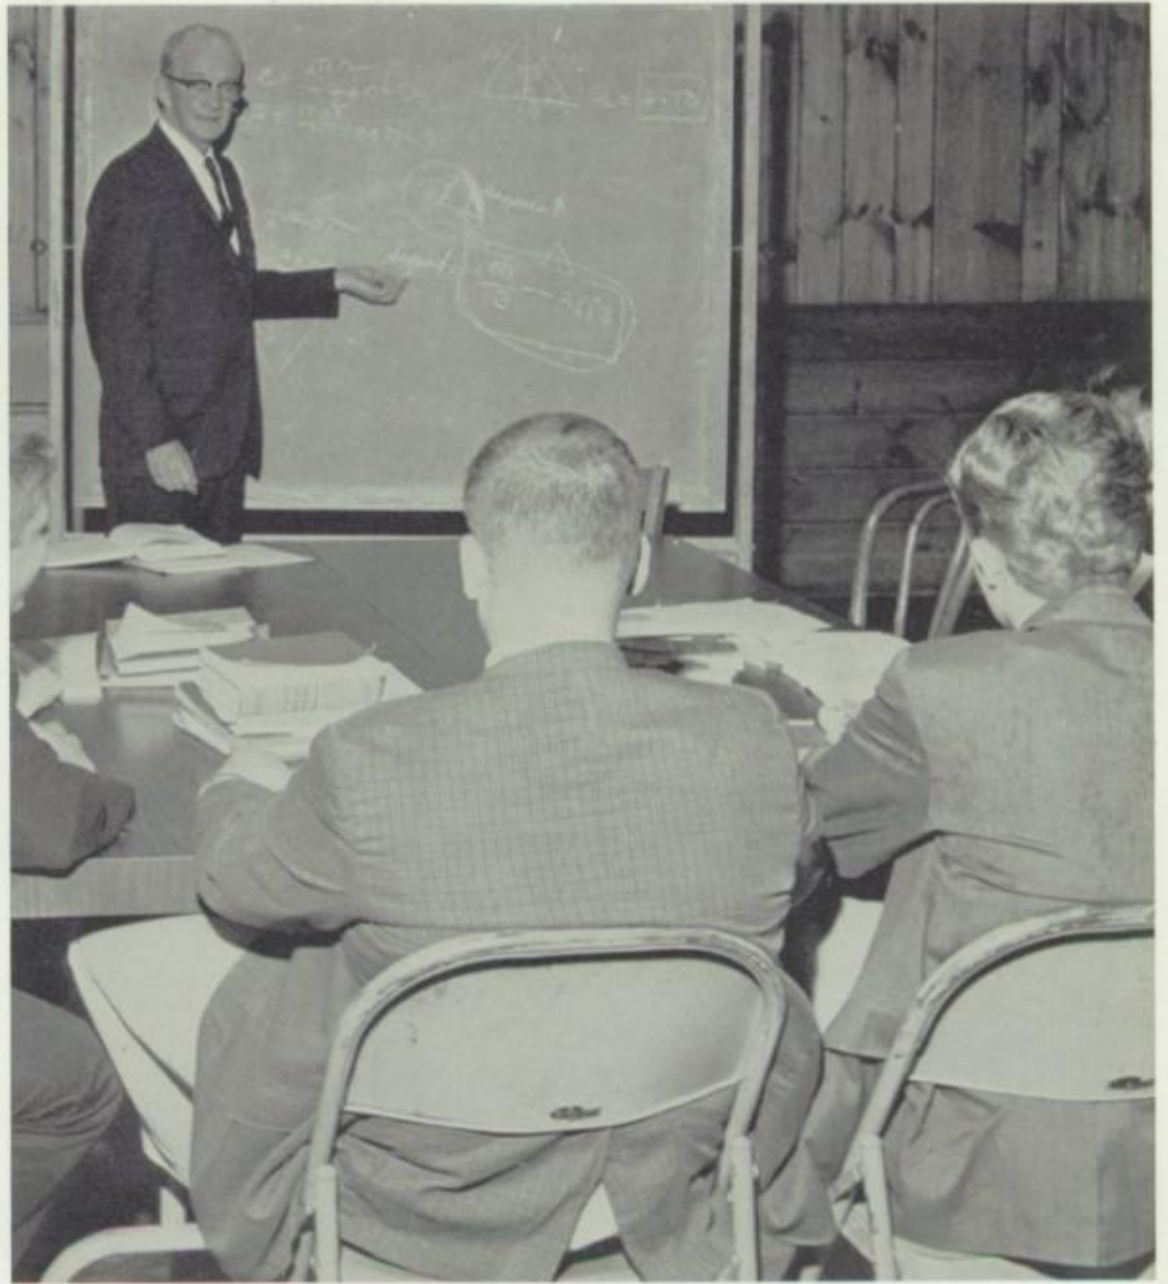

Mr. Bernard Jurale, chemistry instructor, conducts a demonstration in one of the Bailey Hall laboratories.

Classroom periods are of forty-five duration. Mr. Robert Patterson here instructs for this time a group of biology students.

Mr. Lyle Butler, instructor in English and History, is also the school chaplain. He teaches in Memorial basement.

Bailey Hall serves for classes in the morning, informal band practice in the afternoon, and Junior School and ninth grade social events in the evening. Upstairs Bailey houses the physics and chemistry laboratories.

Dr. Ahmet Ararat, instructor in Social Studies and Science on the sixth and seventh grade levels, answers an interested student's question.

Mr. David Meade, who taught in England for thirteen years, now instructs a seventh grade history class.

Junior School instruction imparts fundamentals

A specialist in the teaching of reading, Mrs. Sara Youngs instructs a social studies class.

Mr. Robert Phillips, eighth grade English instructor, teaches in the Junior School building adjacent to Hurley Hall. Mr. Phillips is advisor for the Junior School Achievement group.

Head of the Junior School, Mr. Michael Kita, takes time off from a busy schedule to consult a homework assignment with Frederick Verdick.

Mrs. Vera Palmer, school librarian, assists Thomas Moran in the use of the new card catalogue files.

Director of Studies, Mr. Stuart Sommerville coordinates study programs and assists in preparing student report sheets.

Arthur N. Sheriff Field House and Von Der Porten Hall add new dimensions to the Academy

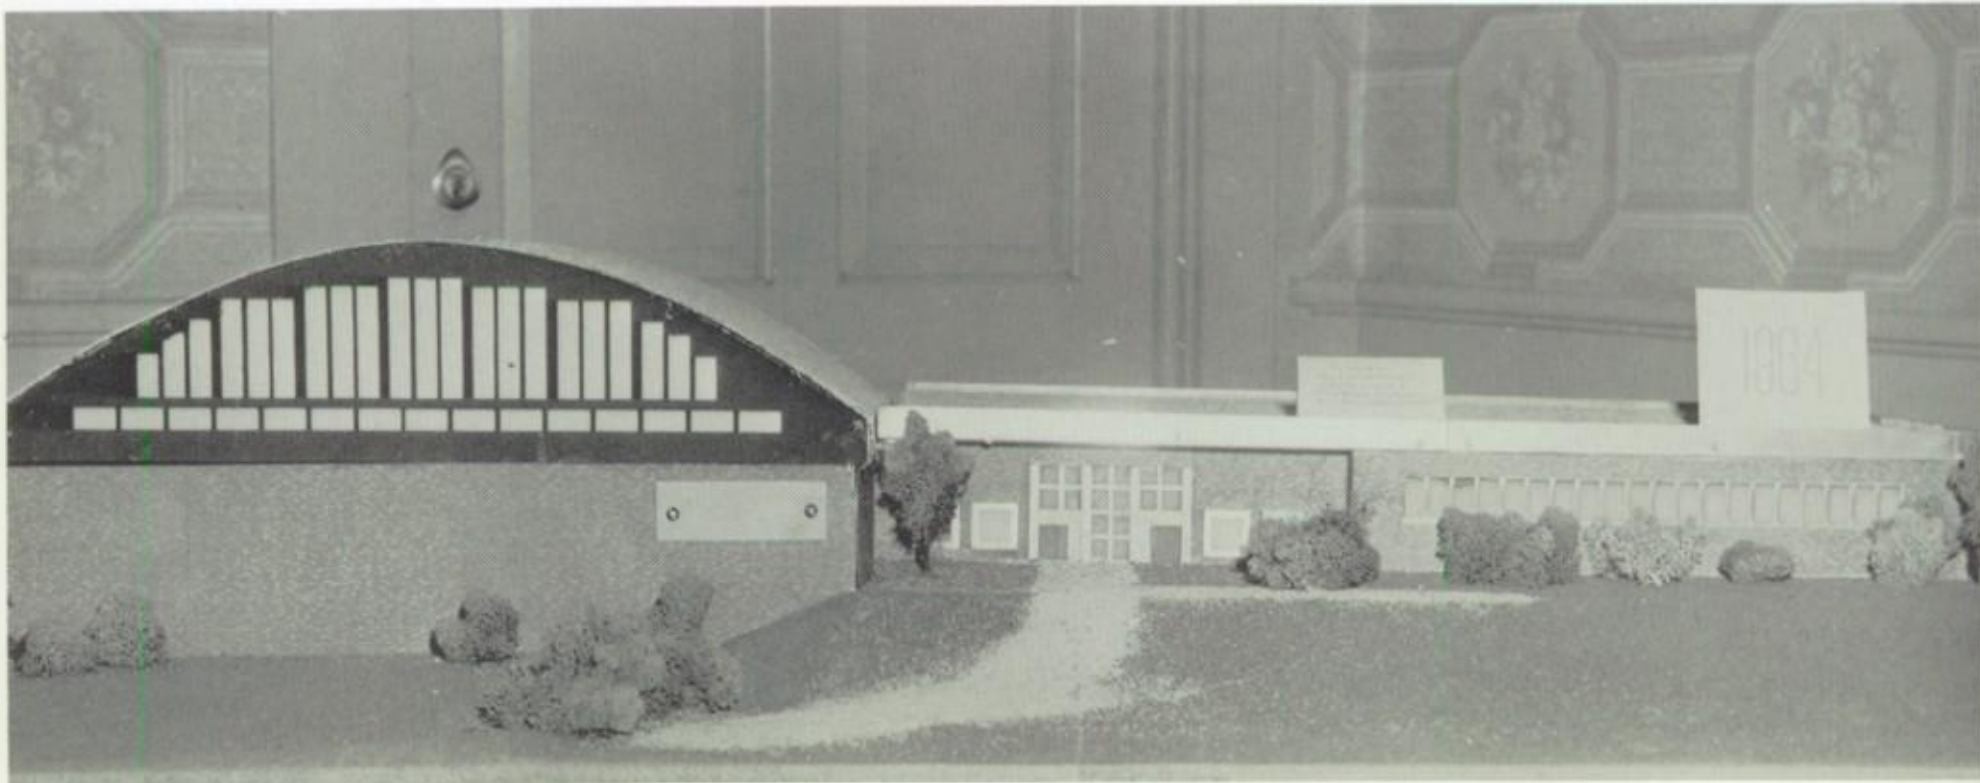

Ground breaking ceremonies took place in the summer. By the winter, footings had been dug, and foundations started to rise.

By early spring, considerable progress was achieved, as walls took on shape and overhead steel beams were assembled.

A model of the field house is in Bowden Hall. The structure should be ready for general use by the spring of 1965. The field house itself is 224 feet by 147 feet and will contain a basketball court, an olympic size swimming pool, locker rooms for visiting teams, and numerous facilities for other sports.

The new dormitory is named after Doctor Maximilian Von Der Porten who taught at the Academy for thirty-one years prior to his death in 1955.

April—The dormitory takes rapid shape as it acquires a roof.

March—In a concentrated effort, the Maintenance Crew raises the walls.

May—The outside almost completed, Von Der Porten Hall should be ready for occupancy in the fall. It will house 120 boys and six masters.

Yearbook Staff gathers, compiles, and edits materials for the 1964 yearbook

On the shoulders of the editors fall the innumerable and important responsibilities of the total book. Here, discussing the end-paper art, are the Art Editor, Richard Haynes, Co-Editors Joe Beck and Ronald Feinstein.

Seabury Hall South is headquarters for most publications. Here, around tables scattered with photographs and working tools, the yearbook staff compiles necessary material. Pains-taking effort, constant double-checking and careful editing are shared by all.

This winter, students had an opportunity to bowl three times a week at the Cheshire Lanes.

A team of ten students from the lower school went for instruction and competitive bowling every Tuesday at 3:30.

Two teams from the upper school, consisting of eight students on a team, went bowling on Wednesday and Thursday at 3:30. Mr. Robert Phillips, who initiated this popular pastime three years ago, was advisor for the teams.

Ski Club travels to Mt. Snow, Vermont

Members of the Ski Club wait at bookstore for bus to Mt. Snow.

Early last fall, a ski club was formed under the direction of Colonel Victor King, assisted by Mr. Jackson Taylor and Mr. Knox Divoll. The club, which had 60 members by mid-season, skied at nearby Powder Hill four afternoons a week, skiing conditions permitting. It also held two Sunday excursions to Mt. Snow, Vermont.

A ski team was formed as a by-product, and is now a recognized varsity sport. The team had four meets, winning one against Milford Preparatory School. Other meets were against Choate, Barlow, and Hotchkiss. A Jayvee team lost its three meets against Chote, Barlow and Hotchkiss.

Massachusetts Prep Meet, taking first place in every event. Three new records were set in this meet: Jon Barnes in 600 yard with a time of 1:16.5, Bob Burg in the shot put with 54 feet 7½ inches, and the mile relay team in 3:36.2.

The trackmen went on to win the Brown University Winter Games with a total of 51½ points. Jon Barnes topped his recently set school record in the 600 yard with a new time of 1:15.7. Bob Burg also surpassed his recent record in the shot put with a toss of 57 feet 5 inches.

The American Shakespeare festival welcomes Academy summer students at Stratford, Connecticut

After the performance of Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra, Carrie Nye, whose portrayal of Cleopatra won high praise, visited with Academy students.

Arrangements were made for picnic lunches after each of the three performances.

On July 5, 1963, the summer school opened with an enrollment of 202 boys from 14 states and 6 countries. Classes were small, encouraging a better student-faculty relationship.

Mr. William Schultz and Mr. James Sincell supervised weekly outings on Tuesdays or Wednesdays to Hammonasset Park on Long Island and other parks.

Students were able to enjoy competitive sports such as tennis, softball, summer basketball, wrestling and sailing. One of the highlights of the sports program was the annual Summer Track Meet held on August 8. First place was awarded to both the Nadeau House and the White House, for their score of 47 points. The boys also took advantage of horseback riding, under the direction of Mr. Ted Mayer, owner of Prospect Stables.

On August 7, 14, and 21, a group of students attended the American Shakespeare Festival Theater in Stratford, Connecticut. They saw four outstanding productions: Henry V, King Lear, and The Comedy of Errors. These three were joined by George Bernard Shaw's Caesar and Cleopatra, the first non Shakespearean work performed at the festival in its nine-season history.

Ground was broken for the new Arthur N. Sheriff field-house on August 15. This project was aided by the efforts of both the Fathers' Association and the Mothers' Association. Distinguished speakers included: Lt.-Gov. Samuel Tedesco, Dr. Clifford Brownell, General George C. Sturges, Mr. Robert Hall, Mr. Fred W. Bens, Mr. John Thorp, and Mr. Alfred G. Fein.

Final examinations were held on August 31 through September 4. There was approximately a three week vacation period before enrollment on September 21 for the regular winter session.

Under a veritable sea of floating blue and white streamers, couples inaugurate the social season at the first major dance of the year which was held in Memorial Study Hall.

Tea Dance welcomes in the social year.

On Friday, November 15, 1963, the Inter-Club Council held its annual fall tea dance featuring the Cheshire Academy Dance Band conducted by Mr. Sayard Stone. Dates were invited from the Prospect Hill Country Day School of New Haven or by dayhops. Many masters and their wives attended. Memorial and Bailey lounges were decorated with pennants and blue and white streamers. The decoration committee was made up of a small group of Inter-Club Council members.

An informal hop was held late in the afternoon, and dancing stopped at 7:30 when the couples took time out for a buffet dinner. The dancing resumed until 10:00.

Smiles and gay conversation were the order of the day as couples and chaperones freely mixed.

Pairing off blind dates, Mrs. Chubb informs anxious girls about their escorts for the evening.

While the activity on the dance floor ceased momentarily, students and their dates gathered in Memorial and Bailey lounges.

Father and Son Banquet

The guest speaker, Mr. Robert Richardson of the New York Yankees, emphasized religion and sportsmanship in the life of an athlete.

Members of the Fathers' Association admire a model of the proposed Arthur N. Sheriff Field House.

On Saturday, November 9, the Academy held its annual Father and Son's day. There was a large turnout of 750 fathers despite the inclement weather conditions. At 12:00 noon, the program began with fathers registering in Bailey Lounge. For the mothers who attended this year there was a special luncheon and fashion show sponsored by the Cheshire Academy Mothers' Association at the Waverly Inn.

At 1:30, the Academy varsity football team played the Yale "A" Freshman Team. The Academy Soccer team also played Avon Old Farms. After the sports program, parents gathered in both Bailey and Memorial lounges for an informal tea. It was here parents met and exchanged ideas with faculty and administration officers.

The main event was the banquet held in the gymnasium. This year's banquet was highlighted by the appearance of Mr. Robert Richardson, second baseman and captain of the New York Yankees and of Mr. Roy Campanella, former catcher for the Brooklyn Dodgers. Mr. Sheriff presented the Cyrus Robinson Taylor Award for superiority in the fields of sportsmanship, conduct, and ability to Michael Kaufmann. The Geoffery Ferris Soccer Award was also presented by the headmaster to Geoffery Harley.

Mr. Alfred Fein, Vice-President of the Fathers' Association and Chairman of the Arthur N. Sheriff Field House, explained the purpose of the proposed field house as a place to increase the physical development of boys attending the school in the future. The guest speaker, Mr. Richardson, spoke on the importance of religion and sportsmanship in the life of an athlete. The invocation was read by The Reverend Lyle Butler.

Two of the most coveted athletic awards are presented by Mr. Sheriff: the Cyrus Robinson Taylor Award for excellence in football to Michael Kaufmann and the Geoffrey Ferris Soccer Award to Geoffrey Harley.

After the presentations Robert Richardson autographs to fans.

Glee Club members who entertain the town and Academy via loudspeakers enjoy an informal hop in Bailey Lounge.

On Sunday afternoon, December 15, at 4 P.M., the annual Christmas program was held. The program, as in previous years, was a total success. It opened with Mr. Sheriff's yearly Christmas message to the student body. The Glee Club, under the direction of Mr. Richard Gavitt, followed Mr. Sheriff's opening with a series of four appropriate songs accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Michael Kita. O Holy Night was then sung by guest soloist, Jacqueline Stefurak. A festival of lessons and carols for Christmas by the Junior School Glee Club was directed by Mrs. Michael Kita. This service is based on ancient precedent and is performed annually at Kings College Chapel, Cambridge University, England.

The Keystones, newest singing group on campus, next entertained with a group of seasonal songs led by Mr. Gavitt. Soloists were Robert Sirota, President of the group, Frederick Bernhardt, Murray Both and William Geist.

The audience was then invited to join in traditional carols. The program closed with a blessing and recessional. The program, attractively prepared for the social event, was by Richard Haynes, yearbook art editor; lighting by Frank Murchison and stage director was Mr. Robert Marshall.

Mothers' Day at the Academy features

On Saturday, May 9, the annual Mothers' Day program was held. Mothers arrived at 10:00 and registered in Bailey Lounge, where they were given identification tags. The program for the day, which requires careful and long planning, was handled by the Mothers' Association under its president, Mrs. Benjamin Preisner and Mrs. Faye Chubb, the school hostess. Coffee and cookies were provided in the morning for guests and faculty. Chances were sold for a silver tea set. The proceeds of this and the money earned by the student sale of chocolates went towards the swimming pool fund.

During the morning, mothers visited classrooms. After lunch, the Junior School and Upper School Glee Clubs entertained the mothers in the auditorium where the annual business meeting was held.

At 2:00 the mothers attended various athletic activities. The program closed with a tea at 4:00 in Bailey and Memorial Lounges where mothers and faculty met, exchanged ideas, and discussed problems.

GRADUATION

Baccalaureate Service

On Sunday, June 7, the Baccalaureate Service began at 3:00 p.m. Led by Dr. John Leahey, Marshal of the Day, the procession marched to the auditorium where non-denominational services were held.

Class President Robert Svensk installed the new officers. Mr. Sheriff delivered his annual speech which is here reproduced in its entirety.

I know that on a day in June like this, with the world beckoning, you who are now filled with an awareness of all life, would not wish to listen to a long discourse, even from Cicero or Demosthenes or Daniel Webster, if one of those famous orators could suddenly appear before you today. But I know, too, that this is a special occasion to which some serious and happy attention is due. Many of you are now setting forth on a new and challenging stage in your life's journey.

Commencement Day, whatever the time of the year, or the state of the world, is never without a touch of sadness. It is an ending and a beginning. One segment of life vanishes, and even in the excitement of forward looking we regret what so swiftly has gone. This June of 1964 we of this campus are losing many of our associates, who leave us with new and perhaps uncertain destinations at college, or in their country's service, but with the most friendly wishes of those who are left behind and in the utmost confidence that wherever they go they will not be found wanting. We are sorry that they must leave and cannot be with us another year. We shall miss them. A larger world calls and will not be denied.

But wherever they go they carry with them memories of which they may not be aware but which remain forever, in countless habits of mind and body, to plague them or to bless them. Whether we know it or not the past is always with us. A page turns in life: behold the past is with us again. It has not died. It is only we who have gone beyond it, for good or for bad.

It is for me of interest now to recall the memories of my own youth, however fleetingly. It is in many ways a different world, that world of my boyhood when I, too, entered into the world of adolescence: on the surface a peaceful, tranquil world with assured pathways stretching before us all, and the excitement of world conflict, communistic aggression, and hydrogen bombs, a development far beyond the wildest flights of the broadest imagination. But still it was a new and at times frightening path we youngsters were about to enter, that path which in a few short years was to lead from childhood to manhood. We had our own problems to meet and solve, and life after all was to prove not so simple. But for the time we could avoid all thought of the morrow.

In short, then, you are all too soon, or perhaps not soon enough, to become adults. I am not sure that as you look around at those of us who are your elders, you are too pleased with that prospect. Perhaps it was one among you who once defined an adult as a person who stopped growing at both ends but didn't stop around the middle. That may be true of the body but let me remind you that in adulthood it is much more important to grow in mind and spirit.

And it is a pleasure to look upon you here and to reflect that you, too, now experience this period of change which we call adolescence. That is rather an abused term, of course, that word adolescence, as if it were some sort of disease that psychologists like to talk about. After all, it means only that you are soon to leave the protected life in which you have been the very center of your universe and are painfully and inexorably to find your way to the vastly more interesting area in which it is you who do the struggling and the protecting. And the spirit of man is such that you will often be impatient to reach the goal of manhood, but often, too, will suffer agony of fear, indecision, and insecurity.

It is natural to think of life as a journey and many great works of literature so refer to our mortal existence. Someday, as you read Shakespeare, you will recall that Hamlet defines death as that bourne or boundary line from which no traveler ever returns. Truly enough from birth to death we travel a long and uncertain path and we cannot be sure of our goal. But let us never forget that what we bring first into this dream of life is the spark we call the soul and that the soul is the very last part of us we carry into that seemingly dark and unknown land which I prefer to call "the greater light." In all the plans you are to make for your future years, always remember that.

This comparison of life to a journey is one which must appeal to us Americans. We are a restless, curious people, always ready to shift scenes, living on wheels, gazing at the world with open eyes. I wonder sometimes if those eyes are seeing eyes. It was Carlyle, an author we seldom read nowadays, who once said: "The eye sees what it brings the power of seeing." Think of that for a moment and ask yourself, what does it avail you to shift from one place to another, if all you do is to see the same things in somewhat different clothes? It is the mind, after all, which truly sees. You all know of that great woman, Helen Keller. Living without sight and hearing, tremendously handicapped, through the power of mind and imagination she achieved a profound knowledge of this universe in which we live. She saw far more than most of us who have eyes and ears.

Let us then think of life as a journey but let us remember that in this journey we use not only legs and eyes, but mind and soul.

There was once a strange, rather grim sort of person who spent years of his life in prison and during that time wrote a great book. We very seldom read Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress any more, and we certainly do not agree with all his views. He had the most distressing beliefs about the presence in this world of the devil—whom he called Apollyon—and of the reality of an avenging God and a hell of physical torture. He was what was called a Puritan and he was convinced that many pleasures which we consider innocent were sure to lead to damnation.

Bunyan's Pilgrim was a man named Christian and he, too, set forth on a journey through life. Knowing Bunyan, you can be assured that the required path was painfully straight and narrow, with many temptations and dangers. There were the dungeon of the giant Despair, and the dreadful Valley of the Shadow of Death, and there were the smirks of a person called Hypocrisy and the gaiety of a place called Vanity Fair—actually no more evil, as I believe, than some of our attractive church bazaars. To Bunyan these were dire, frightening realities, and he manages to impart his conviction to the reader of the book. I remember to this day how fascinating the Pilgrim's Progress was to me when I stumbled upon it as a child.

There is one unforgettable person among the many in this book, a character—if I may use a bit of modern slang—called Ignorance. This was a persistent, pushing fellow who kept dogging the footsteps of Christian and his companion, Hopeful, inflicting his views upon them and qualifying in every way as a complete bore. He never thought he was wrong in any degree. I am sure you have all met just such opinionated people who think they have all the answers and never hesitate to express their opinions, because as Ignorance says, their heart tells them they are right.

Do note how shrewd an observer Bunyan has been in this case. Your true ignorant bore is not the fellow who does not know, but the one who always pretends he knows and so avoids the arduous task of thinking. In this infinitely complex world it is no disgrace not to know, provided always we understand our limitations and in true humility seek the truth.

You will all someday become acquainted with another great and individualistic personage, the old Greek philosopher

Socrates, who used to say he was the wisest man in Athens, since all the others knew nothing, whereas Socrates also knew nothing, but didn't pretend he knew. He was a great one to ask questions, that old ugly philosopher, and a source of annoyance to all the pretenders, of whom there were many then, as always. He would take hold of a know-it-all like Bunyan's Ignorance, back him into a corner, ask him a series of seemingly harmless questions, get the victim to commit himself, and then bang! come out with another unanswerable question which punctured the poor fellow's balloon of self-conceit, and there Ignorance collapsed in all his ego. It got so that all the self-important fellows resented Socrates and started to avoid him. They'd see him coming and one of them would say: "Here comes that pest Socrates, let's dodge around this corner." They had to get rid of him somehow. In the end they dragged him into a courtroom on a charge of corrupting youth and made him drink the poison hemlock. I hope this doesn't lead you to believe it a good idea to be like Ignorance rather than Socrates.

Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress is an allegory and Socrates was very much alive, but both men had the same idea. So far as it is given to us to see and understand in life, let us search honestly for truth, and not the pretense of knowledge, as poor Ignorance did, to the final loss of his soul. You boys in the years to come will encounter all the perils the Pilgrim did, despair and vanity, discouragement and temptation. These dangers are most to be feared when you find them within you rather than without. For that very reason most of all get rid of that fellow Ignorance. And the way to do that is to begin now to look for knowledge in the true way by training eyes and mind to see, by acquiring the basic tools which help to build knowledge and wisdom, above all by achieving integrity, and honestly mastering the substance of wisdom, not the mere symbols found in diplomas, titles and other tokens.

I hope you boys will bear with me as I express one more thought. Never, however long your life, however weary you may be, never stop in your pursuit of truth. This is an unending goal, I know, far greater than the other unimportant goal of material prosperity, far more difficult to reach. But it is the one way in which you can attain the only happiness which is not illusion.

There was another great man, a poet named Tennyson who wrote a magnificent poem about Ulysses. Perhaps some of you know of Ulysses through Homer's epic The Odyssey: how after the fall of Troy he tried to return to his island home in Ithaca and his wife Penelope, and how episode after episode, disaster piled on disaster, detained him for endless years. He did return at last, old and tired, to a few short years of rest. A magnificent epic always stirring to read! Well, in his poem, Tennyson has added to the original thought. He says that as an old man Ulysses was unwilling to give up. This great fascinating world still beckoned to him with its mysteries and once more he called his faithful sailors together for one last trip westward across the boundless sea.

Listen to his words:

"For always roaming with a hungry heart
Much have I seen and known

I am part of all that I have met,
Yet all experience is an arch wherethrough
Gleams that untravelled world whose margin fades
Forever and forever when I move:
How dull it is to pause, to make an end,
To rust unburnished, not to shine in use!
As though to breathe were life!

Though much is taken, much abides."

These words are not the words of Ignorance, of pretense to knowledge, of escape to the flowery paths of easy attainment. They are the words of experience, and a deep desire to follow the path of truth and knowledge to the very end.

Robert Browning lived in England during Tennyson's time. He, too, has written a famous poem, "Rabbi Ben Ezra," in which he extends this invitation:

"Grow old along with me,
The best is yet to be,
The last of life for which the first is made."

You can't get away from that thought, can you? This, the first of your life, must lead to the last. What kind of last will it be?

And so, like Browning, I invite you to the great journey, the entrancing journey, which may lead you far higher than you can now expect. Browning in his poem went on to say that it is not only the outward face of each person that counts, his daily work and the great show he makes in life, but rather all that goes on inside, his unexpressed impulses to action, his silent mastery of self and circumstance, everything he cannot find words or deeds to express; all, all are important.

And it will be important for you, too, all of you—the whole of life, not just the glamor, and to repeat: deep within each one of you is the final reality: that soul which came with you into this sunny world and someday will leave with you. There within you is the great potential. Never let this talk of electrons and protoplasm and the ascendancy of matter over spirit deceive you. You have the eternal within you. Search for it.

We, the members of the yearbook staff, here recognize our indebtedness to the many people who have advised, assisted, and encouraged us.

The senior photographs are by G. Fox and Company, Hartford, Connecticut, whose photographers Mr. John Vignoli and Mr. Morton Burkowitz provided us with a number of special occasion photographs. We recognize also the competent and cooperative assistance of Mrs. Barbara Mitchell, Director of the Photoreflex Studio of G. Fox and Company. Most of the photographs are the work of our staff photographer Mr. Paul Hebert. We would like to thank Friedman-Abeles of the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Connecticut for their generous and kind assistance in supplying us with stills. We also thank Mr. Joseph Petis of the New Haven Register for many athletic photographs.

Wherever possible we have used the photographs of students, and we especially recognize the work of Harvey Klorman, Samuel Rothbeind, Joseph Minskoff, and James Volkober.

Our thanks are extended to the Columbia Printing Press of New Haven for their advice and assistance with the foreword art.

We also wish to express our thanks to Mr. Gron Lloyd, our yearbook representative from the Taylor Publishing Company in Dallas, Texas.

In conclusion, we express our gratitude to all those on the faculty and staff whose kindness and cooperation were a constant encouragement.
